

Commonwealth/FEMA Centers Still Available to Help Eastern Kentuckians

Release Date: November 3, 2022

FRANKFORT, Ky. – Kentuckians looking for help filling disaster related needs, or those who applied with FEMA and have questions about their application or appeal, still have time to visit a commonwealth-managed Multi-Agency Resource Center or FEMA Disaster Recovery Center. There is no limit to how many times survivors can visit these centers.

Multi-Agency Resource Centers are here to help

The commonwealth-managed Multi-Agency Resource Centers (MARC)s are “one stop shop” locations where public and private organizations come together to assist those affected by disasters. MARCs are collaborative operations. By bringing these agencies together, the MARC is staffed and managed by Kentuckians helping Kentuckians for the coordinated recovery of those affected by the disaster.

Beginning Monday, Nov. 7:

- Floyd County: Christian Appalachian Project Foley Community Center – 6134 KY-80, Martin, KY 41649

FEMA Disaster Recovery Centers

These centers are designed to guide survivors through the recovery process. FEMA representatives can help survivors check the status of their applications, understand their determination letters and help upload documents needed for an appeal.

In addition, survivors can pick up handouts on rebuilding safer and stronger homes and the option of property buyouts. The SBA is also at the recovery centers to answer questions about low-interest disaster loans.

All Disaster Recovery Centers are open 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Other commonwealth and federal resources may also be available at certain locations. See the list below for services available at each center:
