

Federal Assistance Fuels Puerto Rico's Recovery from Tropical Storm Isaiás

Release Date: Novanm 10, 2020

GUAYNABO, Puerto Rico – More than $1.8 million in federal disaster assistance is helping fuel the recovery of Puerto Rico residents and businesses that suffered damage in Tropical Storm Isaiás from July 29-31.

As of Nov. 8, FEMA's Individuals and Households program approved $513,834 in Housing Assistance to repair disaster-damaged homes and pay for temporary housing. Another $512,767 was approved under FEMA's Other Needs Assistance program, which provides funding for disaster-related expenses and serious needs including medical, dental, transportation, moving and storage expenses.

Additionally, the U.S. Small Business Administration approved more than $819,500 in low-interest disaster loans to 34 homeowners, renters and businesses.

After Puerto Rico received a major disaster declaration for Isaiás on Sept. 9, a total of 847 eligible individuals and households in the designated municipalities of Aguada, Hormigueros, Mayagüez and Rincón applied for FEMA disaster assistance.

Disaster Legal Services, a partnership between Puerto Rico Legal Services, the American Bar Association Young Lawyers Division, DisasterLegalAid.org and FEMA, received $5,000 in FEMA funding for administrative support for volunteer lawyers who assist survivors. The program provides free legal help with various disaster-related problems. Among them: filing FEMA appeal forms, completing insurance claims for doctor and hospital bills, and resolving disputes with home repair contracts and contractors.

As the recovery operation moved forward, FEMA opened four Disaster Recovery Centers in the designated municipalities under COVID-19 safety measures. The Mayagüez center remains open until Nov. 13 for residents to speak to specialists in person and update their applications. The center will suspend operations
