

Personal Property and FEMA Assistance

Release Date: Jul 5, 2024

FEMA can help eligible New Mexico residents repair or replace appliances, clothing, furniture, computers, essential tools, and accessibility-related items damaged by a disaster. Insurance coverage is the best way to recover after a disaster. However, FEMA assistance for personal property may be available if you are uninsured or underinsured.

What is Personal Property Assistance?

Personal Property Assistance is money to help repair or replace items inside your home that you need for daily living.

Which kinds of personal property can FEMA help with?

Personal Property Assistance can help repair or replace the following:

- Household appliances, like a refrigerator, washing machine, etc.
- Essential clothing needed due to loss, damage or contamination.
- Home Furnishings: Basic furnishings found in a bedroom, kitchen, bathroom and living room.
- Computing Devices: This includes one personal or family computer. You may be eligible for funds for additional computers required for work or school that were damaged by the disaster.
- Uniforms, books, computers, tools, and other items your household needs because your work or school requires the items.
- Wheelchairs, communication aids, and other items needed for daily living by a member of the household with a disability. Money you get for these items doesn't count towards the maximum amount of Other Needs Assistance you can receive.
- Tools Required for Work and School: Tools and equipment required for your job and items required for educational purposes. This assistance also applies to self-employed individuals.
