How to Promote 2014 National Preparedness Month (NPM) “Be Disaster Aware, Take Action to Prepare”

The Ready Campaign established four universal building blocks of emergency preparedness: Be informed, Make a Plan, Build a Kit, and Get Involved. America’s PrepareAthon! builds on this foundation by encouraging millions of Americans to focus on a simple, specific activity that will increase preparedness.

America’s PrepareAthon! is a new national community-based campaign for action that focuses on increasing emergency preparedness through hazard-specific drills, group discussions and exercises. National PrepareAthon! Days are held every spring and fall. During National Preparedness Month we ask you, your family, community, school and workplace to take action by planning a National PrepareAthon! Day on or around September 30th. We recommend using digital media tools as a way to promote National Preparedness Month, September 1st-30th.

The 2014 National Preparedness Month theme is: “Be Disaster Aware, Take Action to Prepare”

Organize a Twitter Chat

10 Tips for Effective Twitter Chats

What's a Twitter Chat?

Twitter chats are planned virtual gatherings hosted in real time on Twitter. They're normally moderated, or guided, by one user to start a conversation on a certain topic. The chat is given a hashtag, such as #NatIPrep, to make it easy for anyone to identify the chat and participate. Think about hosting a Twitter chat to share your emergency preparedness expertise and build excitement around your National Preparedness Month activities. Here's how to get started:

1. Choose a Topic

Start by thinking about which hazard is most relevant to your area and would have the greatest impact on you and your community. Next, determine who you want to participate in the conversation. For example, you may want to invite your employees and customers to join the chat. Think about specific topic areas to focus on, like signing up for local alerts and warning or collecting important documents to keep in a safe place.

2. Know Your Audience

Is your intended audience active enough on Twitter to carry on a lively discussion? If so, think about preparedness questions they'd find interesting to best engage them. If your audience isn't active on Twitter, it may be best to participate in other Twitter chats rather than host your own.

3. Pick a Date and Time

What date and time is your target audience most likely to participate? If your audience works a 9-to-5 job, then lunchtime or early to mid-evening may be the best time.

4. Register Your Chat with FEMA

Visit www.ready.gov/prepare for a list of upcoming national and regional Twitter chats that you can promote and participate in. If you're hosting your own chat, register your chat so we can list it on our website and help you promote it!

5. Promote Your Twitter Chat

Publicize your chat to increase participation. Publish the details on your website and social media channels. Be sure to include the date, time, topics, and #NatIPrep hashtag.

6. Set the Format and Moderate

Think of your Twitter chat as a guided conversation, with you as the guide. As the moderator, you can help structure the discussion by asking specific questions about a topic. Number the questions as Q1, Q2, etc. Ask participants to reply with answers using A1, A2, etc. For example:

Q1: To prepare for a flood, what important documents should you have ready? #NatIPrep.

A1: I have a copy of my driver's license, Social Security card, birth certificate, and kids' medical records and IDs in a waterproof box! #NatIPrep.

The Role of the Moderator

The moderator guides the conversation. As the moderator, you should have specific tweets and topics available to post during any lulls in the chat.

Pick a Tool for Moderation

Use HootSuite, TweetDeck, or another Twitter dashboard that allows you to publish tweets and follow the discussion by monitoring the #NatIPrep feed.

Each question gets 15 minutes on average, and chats usually last approximately one hour. Decide on your Twitter chat topic and questions in advance so that you can promote them beforehand.

7. Use a consistent hashtag like: #NatlPrep or #PrepareAthon

If you host a Twitter chat, use #PrepareAthon as part of your branding.

8. Announce Chat Guidelines

Every Twitter chat has its own rules. The start of a chat is a good time to establish guidelines and the chat format discussed above. For instance, you might say:

This #PrepareAthon chat is a time to discuss emergency preparedness. Please refrain from offensive language and product promotion.

We have four questions: Q1–Q4. Answers questions using A1–A4. Don't forget to add #PrepareAthon to your tweets to be part of the chat.

9. Follow Up After the Chat

Thank everyone for their participation. Follow up with a summary of the conversation for those who were unable to join. And please share it with us @PrepareAthon @Readygov

10. Evaluate and Learn

Evaluate the success of your chat by the number of participants and tweets (include retweets, mentions, and favorites). Also, look at the total reach and impressions of your chat. At the end of your chat, ask: What would you like to see next time? Now, use that feedback in the next chat you host or participate in.

Activities to Promote the Twitter Chat

- Send invitations via Twitter direct message or email.
- Include the hashtag in your email signature block.
- Ask Twitter followers to retweet the invite.
- Advertise on other channels (e.g., Facebook, blog, website).
- Promote in traditional places (e.g., office lobby).
- Always include the time, date, and hashtag!
