

District of Columbia Severe Winter Storms and Snowstorms – FEMA-1890-DR

Declared March 24, 2010

On March 10, 2010, Mayor Adrian M. Fenty requested a major disaster declaration due to a severe winter storm/snow storm during the period of February 5-11, 2010. The Mayor requested a declaration for Individual Assistance; Public Assistance, including snow assistance; and Hazard Mitigation for the District of Columbia. During the period of March 3-5, 2010, a joint Federal, State, and local Preliminary Damage Assessment (PDA) was conducted in the District of Columbia and is summarized below. PDAs estimate damages immediately after an event and are considered, along with several other factors, in determining whether a disaster is of such severity and magnitude that effective response is beyond the capabilities of the State and the affected local governments, and that Federal assistance is necessary.¹

On March 24, 2010, President Obama declared that a major disaster exists in the District of Columbia. This declaration made Public Assistance requested by the Mayor available to the District and eligible local governments and certain private nonprofit organizations on a cost-sharing basis for emergency work and the repair or replacement of facilities damaged by the severe winter storms and snowstorms in the District of Columbia. This declaration also made Public Assistance, including snow assistance, requested by the Mayor available to the District and eligible local governments in the District of Columbia. Finally, this declaration made Hazard Mitigation Grant Program assistance requested by the Mayor available for hazard mitigation measures in the District of Columbia.²

² When a Governor's request for major disaster assistance under the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, as amended (Stafford Act) is under review, a number of primary factors are considered to determine whether assistance is warranted. These factors are outlined in FEMA's regulations (44 CFR § 206.48). The President has ultimate discretion and decision making authority to declare major disasters and emergencies under the Stafford Act (42 U.S.C. § 5170 and § 5191).

³ Degree of damage to impacted residences:

- Destroyed – total loss of structure, structure is not economically feasible to repair, or complete failure to major structural components (e.g., collapse of basement walls/foundation, walls or roof);
- Major Damage – substantial failure to structural elements of residence (e.g., walls, floors, foundation), or damage that will take more than 30 days to repair;
- Minor Damage – home is damaged and uninhabitable, but may be made habitable in short period of time with repairs; and
- Affected – some damage to the structure and contents, but still habitable.

⁴ By law, Federal disaster assistance cannot duplicate insurance coverage (44 CFR § 206.48(b)(5)).

⁵ Special populations, such as low-income, the elderly, or the unemployed may indicate a greater need for assistance (44 CFR § 206.48(b)(3)).

⁶ Ibid (44 CFR § 206.48(b)(3)).
