Individual Assistance – Remote Inspections

- Housing inspections may be conducted remotely by trained inspectors.
- Different methods of validation will be used to help make determinations, including:
  - Photo or imagery that is geocoded and visually indicates the damage
  - Visual validation of the home exterior by a FEMA inspector
  - A verifiable contractor's estimate or structural engineer's report detailing the repairs needed due to disaster-caused damage to the home
  - Supporting documentation from the state or county reflecting the home is destroyed as a direct result of the disaster

- FEMA will not make determinations that a home was destroyed solely based on a remote inspection phone call with the applicant.
- Remote inspections have no impact on some types of assistance available that do not require an inspection. This includes childcare, transportation, moving and storage, and disaster-related medical or dental expenses.
