

Use FEMA Funds Wisely

Release Date: Dec 29, 2021

FEMA may audit survivors to confirm they spent grants for basic home repairs, replacing essential household items or paying for somewhere to stay if they cannot return home. FEMA sends survivors letters that detail approved uses for grants, including:

- Repairs to make a home safe, sanitary, and fit to live in;
- Rental assistance to temporarily pay for a place to stay;
- Repair or replacement of a disaster-damaged essential vehicle;
- Medical care for an injury caused by the disaster;
- Replacing clothing, occupational tools and educational materials; and
- Moving and storage expenses related to the disaster.

Disaster grants should not be used for travel, entertainment, regular living expenses, or any discretionary expenses not related to the disaster. Survivors should keep receipts for three years to show how they spent FEMA grants and document how disaster funds were used.

Federal law prohibits duplicating assistance from other sources, such as insurance.

If grant money is not used as described above, you may have to repay FEMA and you could lose eligibility for further federal assistance that could become available.
