

FEMA Disaster Recovery Centers Open in Cayey and Vega Baja

Release Date: September 30, 2022

San Juan, Puerto Rico – Two additional Disaster Recovery Centers (DRCs) are now open in Cayey and Vega Baja. The joint DRCs, a partnership between the municipality, the Government of Puerto Rico and FEMA, will help Hurricane Fiona survivors apply for FEMA assistance, upload documents needed for their application and answer questions in person.

The governor of Puerto Rico, Pedro R. Pierluisi, urged the residents of Cayey and Vega Baja who were directly affected by hurricane Fiona to visit these Centers to receive adequate assistance and make their claims. “As U.S citizens we have the federal government, resources to help our people and for that reason every person affected by the hurricane should go to these Centers. We are working together for the recovery of our Island”, Pierluisi said.

Representatives from the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) are on hand at the DRC to provide program information and explain how to apply for SBA’s low-interest disaster loans for homeowners, businesses, private nonprofits, and renters, and provide information about repairs and rebuilding to make homes more disaster resistant.

Services are provided in English and Spanish. If you need a reasonable accommodation or a sign language interpreter to communicate with FEMA, please send an email to FEMA-PRaccessible@fema.dhs.gov. You can also call 1-833-285-7448, press 2 for Spanish.
